Programs on sustainable management of agriculture and tourism are organized with educational benefits for local or national communities. These programs are free of charge.

Description: The promotion of rural areas and the development and sustainability of rural tourism can only be possible through the promotion and recognition of rural areas. Projects developed for these purposes, activities to be organized and trainings given gain importance. Ege University carries out activities for this purpose with its faculty, staff and students. One of these is the Efeler Yolu project, which was selected as one of the Green Destinations “Top 100 Stories” in 2023. Efeler Yolu is a 500-kilometer multi-stage and marked trekking route starting from Bornova district of Izmir, crossing the Nif Mountain and Bozdağ mountain ranges, returning to the highlands of Kiraz and ending at the Meryemana in Ephesus-Selçuk via Aydın Mountains. The objectives of the Efeler Way Project are: To ensure the protection, promotion and sustainability of the natural, historical, cultural and archaeological values of the villages on the route and the route line; To support the economy provided by agriculture and animal husbandry by creating new areas of economic activity; To revitalize social life through tourism, to ensure that young people live happier in the lands where they were born and raised, to prevent youth migration from the villages; To establish the connection of Efe / zeybek culture with nature and to promote this culture internationally.
